An officer stopped a vehicle for speeding. The officer approached the driver's side door and identified himself as a police officer and asked the male driver for his driver's license. The officer was immediately struck with the strong odor of marijuana coming from the interior of the car. The officer looked over at the male passenger and saw that he was smoking a freshly lit cigarette. He also appeared to be moving in his seat a lot. His movements made the officer suspect the passenger was trying to conceal something. The officer asked the driver to step out of the vehicle and come to the rear of his car. The officer informed the driver that he smelled the strong odor of marijuana coming from his car. He said he had not smoked any marijuana. The officer asked if he had smoked in the past and he said he had smoked marijuana in the past. He was also asked if he smelled the marijuana in the car he was driving. He said yes but, he maintained he did not smoke anything. The officer then informed him that he had probable cause to search his vehicle. When the officer had the passenger exit the car, he freely admitted they both had just finished smoking a "Blunt". During the search, the officer did find marijuana in the car. The car was impounded and both males were taken to jail.
